North Dakota...The Only State Without Voter Registration

No Voter Registration

North Dakota is the only state without voter registration.

Although North Dakota was one of the first states to adopt voter registration prior to the turn of the century, it abolished it in 1951. It is also worth noting that North Dakota law still provides cities with the ability to register voters for city elections.

North Dakota is a rural state and its communities maintain close ties and networks. North Dakota's system of voting, and lack of voter registration, is rooted in its rural character by providing small precincts. Establishing relatively small precincts is intended to ensure that election boards know the voters who come to the polling places to vote on Election Day and can easily detect those who should not be voting in the precinct.

Voting in North Dakota

Precincts in North Dakota maintain a list of voters who have voted in previous elections. When a voter approaches a polling place they are asked to provide an acceptable form of identification. Then the election board will attempt to locate the voter's name on the voting list. If the voter's name is on the list, the voter's name and address are verified and the voter is then allowed to vote.

Voters Who Move Within the State

According to North Dakota law, if a qualified elector moves from one precinct to another precinct within the state, the acts of residing at a new address for thirty days and verifying that address as provided under section 16.1-01-04.1 of the North Dakota Century Code constitutes a change in the individual's voting residence. NDCC § 16.1-01-04.2

However, this does not authorize an elector to continue voting in his or her former precinct because he or she has not yet voted in the precinct in which he or she actually resides.

Voter Qualifications

In order to vote in North Dakota, you must be:

- A citizen of the United States;
- Eighteen years or older on the day of election;
- A resident of North Dakota;

- A resident in the precinct at least thirty days immediately preceding any election; and
- Able to provide a North Dakota driver's license, nondriver ID, or tribal ID that includes your current residential address and date of birth. If an individual's valid form of identification does not include all the information required in subsection 2 of NDCC §16.1-01-04.1, or the information is not current, the identification must be supplemented by presenting any of the documents as outlined in subsection 3 of NDCC § 16.1-01-04.1.

Fraudulent Voting and Election Contests

What happens to a vote that is cast fraudulently, even if the fraudulent voter is discovered, investigated, and prosecuted? As is the case in other states, the vote is still cast. Since the vote is secret, it is still counted and canvassed. However, a candidate, or group of electors still have the ability to contest an election regardless of whether or not a prosecution of voter fraud has or may take place. The contesting process must be initiated in a court of original jurisdiction (e.g. District Court). As a result of an election contest, a court may determine to alter the outcome of the election.

The contesting process is very similar to the contesting process in other states that have voter registration. However, North Dakota does not employ the initial restrictive and costly barrier of voter registration.

Voter Fraud

Is voter fraud possible in North Dakota? Yes.

Have there been incidents of widespread voter fraud in North Dakota? No.

Does North Dakota have widespread problems with non-citizens voting? No.

Is voter fraud possible in voter registration states? Yes - absolutely - and we hear about examples of it during every election season.

Although voter fraud has not been widespread in North Dakota, and we have had very few known incidents of voter fraud, the possibility of voter fraud is still of great concern. This is especially true as North Dakotans move to cities and growing communities where once smaller precincts are becoming more populated and the rural character of North Dakota diminishes. As an example, precincts in the cities of Fargo and Bismarck have grown from several thousand qualified electors and nearly two thousand actual voters. These growing precincts are certainly larger than the small precincts that North Dakota's unique election system is based upon.
